Abstract: The J.J. Kilpatrick Family Candelaria Papers, 1880-1999 (bulk 1913-1986), document roughly 100 years in the history of the small border town Candelaria in Presidio County, Texas. The early years of the collection document border tension and violence during the Mexican Revolution. During this period, J.J. Kilpatrick was known to document and expose many hostile situations on the border. A prolific writer, in addition to border tension, Kilpatrick also extensively wrote on religious topics. In Candelaria, the Kilpatrick family had a very successful cotton plantation which was farmed by Mexican tenants. The Kilpatrick family also ran the Candelaria General Store for over 80 years. In 1948, J.J. Kilpatrick’s granddaughters, Marion Howard Walker and Frances Eleanor (Nellie) Howard returned to Candelaria to take over the Kilpatrick assets, including managing the general store, cotton plantation, and ranch. They remained in Candelaria until retirement c. 1986. This collection is arranged into eleven series: Series I, J.J. Kilpatrick Writings, c. 1880-1935; Series II, Jack Howard Diaries, 1898-1913; Series III, Legal 1894-1989; Series IV, Correspondence 1882-1992; Series V, c. 1916 - 1980, dates; Series VI, Water Commission, 1946-1984; Series VII: Clippings and Scrapbooks, dates; Series VIII: Subject files, Series IX Candelaria General Store/Financial, 1889-1999; Series X, Photographs, 1910-1953; Series XI, Oversize, 1916-1948.

Biographical History

James Judson Kilpatrick

James Judson Kilpatrick was born on March 22, 1857. Before moving to Texas, he taught school in Alabama and Georgia. He was principal of the John Reagan School in Houston for a short time, but was in poor health, so he moved to Candelaria, West Texas, where his eldest daughter Mary (Mamie) Howard owned the General Store and taught school. Shortly after arriving to Candelaria, in 1910 Kilpatrick began a successful cotton plantation that was operated through the 1960s.

During the Mexican Revolutionary War period, Kilpatrick was well-known for his inflammatory writing against the army presence in Candelaria, and the Big Bend region in general. He also frequently wrote about religion. Kilpatrick compiled and bound two self-published manuscripts on religion and border tension which are found in the Papers. J.J. Kilpatrick and his wife Lula, who was Post Master at Candelaria, had seven children who survived past infancy: Mary Macon Kilpatrick Howard (1882 - 1970), Dawkins Darwin Kilpatrick (1886 - 1947), Lula Livingston Kilpatrick Rives (1889 - 1970), James Judson Kilpatrick Jr. (c. 1894 - 1929), Harriet Huxley Kilpatrick Burns (1896 - 1989), Margaret Matilda Kilpatrick Hornbuckle Lawler Goetz( 1898 - 1997), and Hugh Hall Kilpatrick (1903 - 1941). J.J. Kilpatrick died on October 29, 1935 in Washington D.C. at a railway station.

Mary (Mamie) Kilpatrick Howard

Mary Kilpatrick Howard, the first child of J.J. and Lula Kilpatrick, was born on February 24, 1882. She became the first Kilpatrick resident of Candelaria when she moved there to be a school teacher in 1903. She quickly bought the Candelaria General Store and hired her teenage brother, Dawkins, to run it. Mary married Border Customs Inspector John (Jack) Howard in 1907 who was shot on the line of duty in 1913. She continued to teach for many decades after the death of Jack. Mary and Jack Howard had two daughters, Marion born in 1909 and Frances Eleanor (Nellie) born in 1911. She died in 1970.

Dawkins Darwin Kilpatrick

Dawkins Darwin was born on August 1, 1886 in Alabama. He moved to Candelaria c. 1903 to help Mamie run the Candelaria General Store. He later bought the general store from his sister, ran the post office, and helped his father with the cotton plantation and cattle ranch. During the Mexican Revolution, many people reported that Dawkins actively did business with bandits who were given guns and ammunition from Dawkins in exchange for cattle they had stolen from across the border. He was a popular resident of Candelaria and played in a local band. Dawkins married Daria Hinojos in 1929. Dawkins died on October 18, 1947. Mamie became administratrix of his estate and most of his land went to his niece Nellie Howard.

Marion Howard Walker and Frances Eleanor (Nellie) Howard

Marion and Nellie were the daughters of Jack and Mamie Howard born in 1909 and 1911 respectively. Upon Dawkins’ death in 1947, they returned to Candelaria to take over the general store, cotton plantation, and ranch. In 1935, Marion Married James E. Walker. James died in 1967 and Marion continued to run the general store and ranch until her death in 1996. Nellie Howard died in 1998.

Series Scope and Content Summary

This series consists of both typed and handwritten J.J. Kilpatrick essays and some poetry. Much of box 2 are handwritten drafts. In this series are two of J.J. Kilpatrick's self-published manuscripts: his bound circulars, and Tragedies of Paradise. Bound circulars include all Kilpatrick circulars, all of which deal with border tension during the Mexican Revolution in and around Candelaria. In addition to circulars regarding border tension, Kilpatrick also wrote letters to the editors of local newspapers and political figures. The first half of Tragedies of Paradise is religious satire and the second half is social commentary. Other writings include criticism against “sensational revivalists”, educational methods and pedagogy, the damming of the Rio Grande, and criticism against temperance and prohibition.

The Tragedies of Paradise Preface

The first draft of the Tragedies was made April and May 1927. The same year I was 70, the 22 of March. Later during the cooler months of 1928, -29, -30 and -31, old paragraphs now and then were rewritten and new ones added.

1. My object was to supply the omissions in Genesis and to correct the ridiculous belief that Eve, the second wife of Adam, permitted the devil, in the form of a snake, to induce her to indulge in the forbidden fruit.

2. To give an account of the unveiling of the future, just before Adam and Eve were driven from the Garden, that they might behold as super punishment the momentous and direful consequences of the sin of disobedience.

3. To emphasize the evil tendencies of the Lilithic or independent woman, the female, all modesty gone, mixing and mingling with the male in business and politics, a career, whether commercial, political, or professional, being incompatible with the natural function of a woman to bear and rear children.

4. To call attention to the fact that while the home and parenthood bust adjust themselves to a changing civilization, the breaking away from the customs, beliefs and taboos handed down from the wisdom of one generation on to another is demoralizing and harmful without the restraining and good influences of others to take their places.

5. To condemn petting parties, especially with liquor, as the beginnings of loose sex morals; the Hot Mama, and other indecent dances, rhythmic erotic hugging set to music; and easy divorce and remarriage, threatening the destruction of the home.

6. To disclose the amazing fact that among the 119 million American people, there is not a single righteous person or Christian, judged by the ten commandments and the two great commandments of Jesus; and to prove that if the biblical doctrine of repentance and belief in Christ is true, the ladies predominate among hell’s inhabitants

I am neither an Atheist, Deist, nor Jehovist; but I would give all the riches of the Indies if I had them, for a child-like faith, that I shall live again, so that at the end of this earthly existence I could exclaim, feeling all is well:

What happiness and sweet surcease

Of sorrows; from troubles free,

To dwell at last in the isles of peace

Beyond life’s stormy sea!
